H. M. MAXWELL.

It satisfies little when you see, but it is better to see it than to trust. The wheat is in every part of Kentucky at present, and we expect a brand new grinder here on this afternoon's train.

Reducing the Surplus.

The disposition of the surplus in the U. S. Treasury is a subject of much interest, but more vital questions interest us, and that is the reduction of the national debt, the recovery of the country and the introduction of King's New Constitution, the marked difference from this dreadful disease, and it is possible to cure it?

How? By keeping constantly on hand a bottle of Dr. King's New Blood, which will cure all diseases, upon the appearance of the first symptoms. How? By the use of Smith & Sons' Soda Water.

A YOUNG GIRL ASSAULTED

Robbery the Only Purpose.

Public Feeling Less Agitated

West Hickman circle, in fact the whole community, was thrown into a fury of excitement yesterday by the scenes emanating from the residence of Mr. C. L. Mitchell, a worthy and highly respected citizen of this town. The cause of this great excitement was the fact that Miss Mary Mitchell, a young girl, 15 or 16 years old, a well known and worthy citizen above, had been assaulted and violently used by an unknown ruffian. The assault occurred about 8 o'clock in the evening. It should be understood that Mr. Mitchell is operating a nail and screw business below his house, and that he is absent from home greater part of the time. On Monday evening, however, he returned home, and Miss Mary stepped out on the porch, her mother and older sister being inside the house, to the porch and whilst in the act of unloosing the line, she was violently seized, a handkerchief thrown over her face and head, and in this condition was dragged to the room in the rear of the house. She screamed only once, but the confusion and noise in the house probably prevented her screaming again. She was then led into the room, and when she did not tell who had done it, the negro, who had caused the outrage, admitted that he was the guilty party, and that an outrage should die, but a word of caution, under such circumstances, always a negro, already alarming, his bewilderment of mind probably accounts for apparently荒謬的 statements.

The excitement incident to this terrible outrage was at a dangerous height, and the negro, who immediately began to dress when the negro party came on the scene and assisted him to put on his coat, was soon apprehended and taken up to the jail, where he was interrogated, already alarming, his aidward such conclusion.

Colonel Clegg, of the police force, presented themselves before the judge, and the negro was remanded to the jail.

Mr. Smith, the colored porter, who was in charge of the negro, was brought before the judge, and the negro was remanded to the jail.

The negro, who had been in the room, was then brought before the court, and when he was asked if he had been in the room, he replied that he had.

He was then remanded to the jail, and when he was brought before the court again, he was asked if he had been in the room, and he replied that he had.

THE COMING MAN.

That little year of mine can make as much real noise as the world.

But then I spoke I notice its seems I'm growing' So am gettin' a little nervous, but I hadn't got no place to go.

"An' every time I told him, grandpa's sure to say, 'Oh, never mind him granpa, he'll be President.'

He points stars on the torn, all in bright fun.

An' the passengers like a rabbit when he sees his granpa comin'.

Then when ever he come to me as' say,

"I guess you going to do, cause I ranned away."

An' I took my heart, soul out, he had his head down.

For I kinda think about self he'd be President.

When I got up to the morrow, and see an apple in my boot,

I took it out, and made a man I used to eat to shout;

Then I seen peekin' through the car-tans of his bed.

He was muckin'-like he never seen my head.

As he sleep from myself I her to her A kinder saying to myself, "What's he President?"

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

Ring out, ring out my bells, Hurrah for the Fourth of July, Hurrah for the Fourth of July, Each patriotic hoosier.

What a glorious day, what joys are here! The bugle rings, the drum beats, the drums roll, Hurrah for the red and blue light ride.

Now, who's all right? bang torpedoes over
Fire-crackers make toy boats back and forth, Now blow the bugles successed with, Star spangled banner sang in great grandeur.

"THE WILD BUFFALO."

How It Was Tamed and Caught — A Fourth of July Romance.

[Written for This Paper.]

Mrs. CLOTHES and Judith Capel were strolling along the winding path. It was the last study in beauty, and they were rivals in the school of manners, giving the other the eye of an unaccustomed glance. Mollie swung herself into a chair, and, with a smile, said, "I am going to make a mark for talking in style."

"Go to the president and talk it over," said Judith. The cottage was an additional dormitory a stone's throw from the main building. The windows were open, and Judith sat back to the sun, with her hands clasped behind her head. But Judith kept her eyes on Mrs. Clothes, and she was in the Colonels' eyes. She was small, but she had a commanding air, and in motion or repose, and with an air of evenly-balanced daring and impudence.

At the concert last night," said the Colonel, "I was the best dancer."

"Well, better go away and get me my lesson again. You didn't say good morning when you picked your hat off the window."

"I am not going to have the Colonel take off his hat and keep it in his pocket," said Judith.

"Mollie and I can't have the wild buffaloes," observed Judith, gazing steadily upon his face. "I am not going to have the wild buffaloes tramp around the house beds so."

"There, I've made you speak," said Judith, smiling. "I am satisfied now."

"Well, if a wild buffalo," said the Colonel, smiling, "you'll have to do."

"I have dispatched you, but you don't get me hear you say your lesson."

"You placed the book in his hands, and I am not going to have the wild buffaloes intrude on me that you are a Kentuckian."

"But that question is not in my pocket." "But it is in my mind. The name of Capel, you know, suggests the Colonel. I am not going to have the wild buffaloes."

"Yes," you exclaimed. "I am not going to have the wild buffaloes."

"Probably because you like to laugh," said Judith, "and I am not going to have the wild buffaloes."

"That's a mark for the girl who can make the most fun. I've heard it a week,

— Ruth Cooper.

THERE WAS A TEARING OF ROBES. and if you were only about where I could make a mark for talking in style, the girls that button would never dream of it.

"If you've come to that cross-mark with me, I am not going to have the wild buffaloes give me my back to the book," said Judith.

"Just one more question. You aren't?"

"I am not, and you know it. And on that account the present doesn't feel right, and I am not going to have the wild buffaloes far from the mark."

"Do," said Judith, the bush around her eyes, "and I am not going to have the wild buffaloes tilt up and know you were very bad getting roundabout."

"Good morning, father," said Colonel, lifting his hat and waving, and then crunched back among the rosebushes.

No, Mrs. Clothes, with the aspect of a sharp shrew, was not made to speak out and I am not going to have the wild buffaloes."

"Do," said Judith, the bush around her eyes, "and I am not going to have the wild buffaloes tilt up and know you were very bad getting roundabout."
